1. Foreword

Article 6, paragraph 6.1 of the Regulation provides that access to the GME information system shall take place through the Internet, according to the procedures and terms defined in the Technical Rules, or through any other procedures provided therein.

Article 9, paragraph 9.1 of the Regulation provides that participants shall access the PAR through specific procedures, defined in the Technical Rules, in order to guarantee the identification of the participants and the authenticity of the transactions.

2. Access to the information system

Access to the information system takes place through a personal identification system of users-participants implemented by means of user id and password.

For this purpose, in the PAR participation application (Annex 1 to the of the Regulation), the applicant must specify the name/s of the party/parties to authorised access the PAR information system on their own account ("users").

Once the procedure for admission to the PAR of the applicant has been completed, each user indicated in the participation application will receive from GME the necessary user ID and password to access to the information system as follows:

- the user id and the first half of the password are sent via e-mail to the user specified in point 4 of the PAR participation application;
- the second half of the password is sent by fax or by SMS to the fax number or the mobile phone number indicated by the applicant in the PAR participation application.

For more security, each user is formally requested to change his/her password after the first access.

Upon specific request by the applicant and the participant, it may also be requested to limit the enabling of one or more users to certain functionalities of the information system, requesting their inclusion as a "viewer", who can access to all menus with the exception of those relating to the submission of offers and receipt of the results.
