

Press Release: 18th December 2025

GME, HENEX, OKTE, OMIE, and OTE as NEMO initiators launch the NEMO Transparency Platform

NEMOs are key in building a well-functioning EU-wide Internal Electricity Market. We strongly believe that markets and transparency should be at the centre of the electrification, decarbonisation, and competitiveness challenges in Europe.

In different fora the NEMOs have been asked by several stakeholders to publish jointly, or at least to coordinate the publication of information which is relevant to the market and sometimes not easily available.

Following this request, GME, HENEX, OKTE, OMIE and OTE (hereinafter, the TP NEMOs Initiators) as fully regulated monopolistic NEMOs clearly understanding the stakeholders' transparency requirements, are pleased to announce the launch of their joint initiative: the NEMO Transparency Platform.

The TP NEMOs initiators believe that the results from the single day-ahead coupling and the single intraday coupling must be made available in a common and easily accessible format in the NEMO Transparency Platform.

The NEMO Transparency Platform is an ambitious, unprecedented project that shows our commitment to transparency and to bring the most relevant market data in our respective bidding zones to a centralised platform.

The NEMO Transparency Platform can be reached at www.nemotransparencyplatform.eu and currently publishes selected results from the single day-ahead coupling and the single intraday coupling for the Czech Republic, Greece, Italy, Portugal, Slovakia and Spain.

We look forward to onboarding other NEMOs soon and getting the feedback from the stakeholders to create shared value.
